The object of the game is to shoot the other players. The only controls are the arrow keys: left for left, right for right, down for...DOWN, and up for UP. The goal of the game is to eliminate all of your opponents in a riotous, unprovoked rampage of rage and fury. You must quickly score a hit or 2. Before all of the rounds start, you will be given the opportunity to fight a practice opponent, who will appear every other round. This round will represent a warm up for the real competition. You don't have to deal damage, but damage you do will count as a K.O. During the rounds: 1. You can pick on and harass the "mark", which is any other player in the game who has enough damage to kill you. 2. Your opponents can damage you and you can damage them. 3. You and your opponents can use many gags. Pick a gi? Sure. Choose an accent? Yes. Pick a pair of boots or change to your favorite pair? Why not? The game is highly customizable and you have the choice to pick any set of (decent quality) clothes that you want. You can choose your weapon. You can give your character a name, or a funny nickname. You can change your hair. You can equip any piece of equipment in the game. You can even get a tattoo. When a round starts and all players have picked their gi's, clothes, and equipment, everyone will run around in circles yelling, running and attacking each other. If two players are fighting, they will exchange damage. The goal is to get enough damage inflicted on the opposing player in a row (misdirected attacks are allowed, but not encouraged), and the player not being attacked is the "mark". Once the round begins, you have about 2-3 seconds to finish the "mark" and then the round will start over. A basic example, assuming the player shooting is the winner, would be: Player 1 shoots Player 2. Player 2 gets to hit Player 1 and damages him for 1 Damage, which is counted as a KO The winner is Player 1 If Player 2 gets to hit Player 1 first, and damages him for 1 Damage, but Player 1 successfully kills Player 2, then Player 2 will be the winner. Once all of the rounds are finished, the player with the most K

Dark Matter and Dust: The Future of Astronomy from a Ground-Based Perspective. In a dark matter-dominated universe, only a small fraction of stars is normal gas and ordinary matter in galaxies. Instead, only a small fraction of stars and galaxies participates in the so-called dark matter. Galactic haloes form due to the relaxation of dark matter in a complex hierarchic framework. In recent years, more and more astronomical observations have proven the dark matter hypothesis, challenging both theoretical and observational proof of the standard cosmology. Observations from many astronomy instruments have provided data in many areas such as near galaxies (luminosity, polarization, metallicity gradients, radial velocities) and far galaxies, and the amount of dark matter in the universe

What's new in Card Storm Idle - Damage Booster:

: The First one was a huge success (on this blog, anyway.) The next, an equally nice long part 2, seems to be on the verge of being a “total go.” I honestly mean it’s going to be the one — or at least the one we’re actively working on. I haven’t written these posts to panic. I really don’t. This one will be a longish part 1 followed by a rather short part 2. I am writing these pages because you are keeping me inspired and partially so that you can indicate what you want to hear more or less when reading future pages on this site. So I will be as supportive as a fellow blogger, many of whom I’ve admired in that past year of writing, can be. I will continue to voice my concerns about certain topics, but not to create a soap box site. There are many good editorial advocacy blogs out there. Mine will be more personal. But this blog is about the writing. The first page explains why I believe that Real Time Writing allows, or at least lends itself to, writing that can be more emotional, personal and “unrealistic.” Granted, it is all still There Is Nothing More Real Than Fiction and/or Xenotropic Murine Muvarian Necrosis. But when a writer takes a bit of time here or there to really think about the feelings of a character in a certain moment, and then lets that emotion come through in a more real or true way, then it is time to feel the real punch. So... we will have less essay sections so that you can get back to writing with as much immediacy as possible. It won't be a "Photo Album." Our first three pages are all real time, but we'll be adding another chapter or two after this. When I'm done with these pages, we'll get back to home of similar length paragraphs, but we'll still be writing "less journal-style." This is a lot for one post. Let's see where this takes us... Feel free to read all comments. In writing, the first page may be the hardest, but while doing so an author may identify what he or she is running from, so to speak, or what it is that he or she wants to learn more
