Mac at Bethesda's E3 press conference! See the PC Version details, the game's official website and the Steam launch trailer, below. ORIGINAL POST:There was a lot of speculation about the future of the Elder Scrolls franchise at this year's E3. Bethesda announced that they will be taking the series back into the darker medieval time period with the Elder Scrolls Online, a free to play MMORPG based on their 2011 hit. Bethesda made the announcement at their E3 press conference during which they also showed new footage of the game, a television ad, and they showcased a UI reveal of the game. The UI shown at E3 will probably look pretty familiar for the Elder Scrolls fans. For those who haven't played the Elder Scrolls series before, it is a series of fantasy role-playing games set in fictional fantasy lands. The gameplay takes place in a gigantic online world where players can create their own character and do whatever they want. The player can explore the virtual world, talk to villagers, complete quests, mine for ore, battle monsters and more. All you need to be able to do is build a base and explore dungeons and other areas of the game. The Elder Scrolls Online is set to released in 2014 on PC and Mac. It is a "free to play" online game that you can opt into whether or not you want to pay for an account. For those that don't know, Bethesda has had a rough time with their Skyrim: Skyrim. After Bethesda announced that they would be making a sequel to their 2011 hit, early footage and screenshots of the game, showed Skyrim more as a Skyrim expansion and less as a true sequel. But hopefully, the Elder Scrolls Online will be better than Skyrim. The Elder Scrolls Online will launch on PC and Mac for free, and because it will be a free to play game, it will be an MMO. If you want to play the Elder Scrolls Online, you can sign up for the beta right now on the official website and join the many fans already there. The game will be released in 2014, and is expected to run on the latest game engines from the company.
